Residuality properties of certain classes of convex functions on normed linear spaces

Abstract

We study the existence of residual sets of certain classes of convex functions on a normed linear space. Such sets play an important role in many optimization algorithms for which elements of a certain class can be used as good approximants of given convex functions and thus the abundance of such elements is crucial for the aforementioned algorithms.